Public Lecture

Wednesday 10 February 2016

5.30pm – 7.00pm

University of Wolverhampton

MC Building Room 228:

This paper draws upon ongoing research and examines men (and women) from the Northeast of England who served in the armies of Australia, New Zealand, Canada, and Newfoundland in the First World War; men such as ‘Simpson’ of Gallipoli fame. This is part of a much larger story of ‘Geordie’ migration that started long before 1914.

This is the seventh lecture of the University of Wolverhampton/Western Front Association First World War Centenary Lecture Series. Generously supported by a grant from the WFA, the Series is held at the University of Wolverhampton, and open to the public and will run until 2018. Admission is free; however you are encouraged to register your details in advance with Dr Phylomena Badsey p.badsey@wlv.ac.uk. You will then be notified of forthcoming events in the series.
